

HOOVER URGES A VIGOROUS FIGHT TO WIN ELECTION

Must 'Clean Out the Heresies' of Roosevelt Administration

NO TIME TO PUSSYFOOT

Must Fight For A Revival of Confidence and Courage in Destiny of America

PHILADELPHIA, May 15—(INS)—Sounding the charge of a militant Republicanism in a vigorous address, former President Herbert Hoover today had called upon the G. O. P. to "clean out the heresies" of President Roosevelt's economic, social and government agencies.

With his words carried to the four corners of the country over a nation-wide radio hook-up, the former chief executive lashed the administration for "breaking" not only its promises, but its solemnly sworn oath of office.

Declaring that "exposure of the New Deal is only one-half of the battle," Hoover urged the Republicans to invite Democrats who propose to take a walk "to join us in faith that we have but one purpose—that is to place the republic on the road to safety."

The ex-president, amid roars of approval from a brilliant assembly in the Academy of Music, advised the G. O. P. what must be done at its national convention in Cleveland, if it hopes to be victorious in November. He laid down a program for the Republican presidential campaign, which included:

"A restoration of morals in government; a revival of confidence and courage in the destiny of America; real policies of economic and social regeneration in place of the New Deal extravaganzas, and realistic, drastic and immediate reforms."

"The platform must be more than a party platform," he warned, speaking in a conversational tone directly into a microphone. "It must be a platform for the American people. Upon the determination of the convention will depend the fate of a generation."

"The bare planks of the platform can be composed on a sheet of paper. They should be composed in the fighting words which the times demand. But behind those words must be the determination to restore American liberty and revitalize American life."

"It would be far better that the party go down to defeat with the banner of principle flying than to win by pussy-footing."

Charging that the "grim danger that confronts America is the destruction of human freedom," he proposed a series of general considerations for the party platform, and a series of immediate reforms. He was interrupted by applause at the end of each sentence as he recited the reforms—a stoppage of extravagance, balancing of the budget, restoration of the gold standard.

The Republican party, he said, should not hesitate to espouse an amending of the constitution, if it becomes necessary, but until then a "government of laws and not of men" should obey it.

In concluding, the former president urged Republican support of national Child Labor Laws, radical revision of the national security act, but retention of its old-age pension provisions, and radical revision of the Federal housing organization.

Rescue Squad To Appeal For Funds Here Tomorrow

Tomorrow the Bucks County Rescue Squad will make its annual solicitation for funds in Bristol and this worthy organization is desirous of collecting a substantial amount.

The Bucks County Rescue Squad maintains its main station at Croydon and a branch station in Parkland and keeps ambulances ready for the call of the public.

Most of the work of this organization is done without recompense and the squad is at the public's call day and night. In accident and emergency cases the response is also instant and the organization has now become a permanent feature in lower Bucks County.

PROMINENT HOLLAND MAN ENDS LIFE BY HANGING

James H. Worthington, 31,
Well-Known in Central
Bucks, is Victim

REASON UNDETERMINED

A prominent resident of Holland ended his life by hanging early this morning.

The victim is James Herbert Worthington, 31, son of Ellen and the late Frank C. Worthington.

Young Worthington arose at an early hour, leaving the house at five a. m. He is said to have gone to the barn of his farm property, climbed a ladder to the rafters of the barn, and after tying a rope about his neck jumped off.

Worthington is well known in this section of Bucks County. He is president of the Churchville Building and Loan Company, a director of the Quaint Oak Building & Loan Association at Somerton, and served for two terms on the school board in his community. His late father was a prominent farmer here.

In addition to his mother, Mr. Worthington is survived by his wife, Clara S. Worthington; three children, Delwyn, aged five, and twin daughters, continued on Page Six

Address "Inheritance" Is Given Mothers, Daughters

About 140 mothers, daughters and friends enjoyed the annual mother and daughter banquet last evening in Bristol M. E. Church.

The affair, held in the lecture room, was sponsored by the Sunday School, and served by the men of the Church. The entire room was occupied with tables, attractively decorated with cut flowers and candles of contrasting color.

Miss Anna Heritage, toastmistress and chairwoman, invoked the blessing, and group singing lead by Miss Carolyn Betz was rendered at intervals during the banquet.

The program was opened by a toast to the Mothers given by Miss Marie Wurster, Croydon, and response by Mrs. G. A. Coon, who exemplified the mother of John Wesley.

Mrs. Otto Grupp, Jr., Croydon, favored with vocal solos "The Songs My Mother Used To Sing" (Wakefield) and "Willie's Prayer" (Ashford).

Miss Heritage then introduced the speaker of the evening, Miss Marie Warner, of the Home Mission Department of the Methodist Church. Miss Warner gave a brief but inspiring address, taking as her text Paul's second letter to Timothy. Her subject was "Inheritance." This inheritance we take from our pioneer mothers, the ones who came on the Mayflower, the ones who went to the Western coast, such mothers as the mothers of Lincoln and Wesley. She also spoke of the Godliness of the old-fashioned mother and the many hardships they endured, as compared to the new-fashioned mothers. In conclusion she told of the responsibility of being a Christian mother.

A bouquet of yellow daisies was presented to Mrs. George Vanzant in honor of the 50th wedding anniversary which she and Mr. Vanzant are marking today.

Mrs. Grupp concluded the program with a solo, "Sing Me a Song of Flowers" (Lane). Mrs. Marion Stauffer accompanied at the piano.

The menu consisted of tomato juice cocktail, chicken a-la-king, parsley potatoes, cole slaw, peas, rolls, radishes, olives, fancy cakes, coffee, ice cream, nuts and mints.

TAKE IT AND LIKE IT!

(From a signed editorial by Raymond Moley in Today for May 9, 1936)

The April meetings of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association have brought into the open a conflict between the press and the Administration so serious that its political effects are impossible to predict at this time. At the moment the quarrel centers around the peep-hole activities of the Black Committee and the Federal Communications Commission. But the antagonism goes beyond this single issue.

The Administration says that the press of the country is in large part Republican and therefore potentially antagonistic, that it is pro-big business, that it is dominated by a selfish desire to please advertisers, that it colors the news and distorts the facts.

The newspaper men assert that no President ever had as friendly a press as this Administration, that the Administration is overloaded with press agents, and that nothing short of journalism by handouts will please Mr. Roosevelt. Many of them maintain that when the newspaper code was under consideration the Administration showed a tendency to limit the freedom of the press. And, for good measure, they add that a hankering for dictatorship has been subtly evident to them ever since . . .

Free criticism is always the lifeblood of democratic government. But there are particular factors that make intelligent criticism imperative at this time. As I see it, these special factors are the following:

(1) In various ways this Administration has assumed more extensive powers than any other in the history of the country. Whether it has done so wisely or unwisely, in each case, involves questions deserving the most earnest public attention.

(2) This Administration has entertained with friendliness a rapid succession of unorthodox proposals. (A notable example is the corporate surplus tax.) It is too often indiscriminating in its interest in the novel, too likely to accept the new merely because it is new.

(3) When an Administration spends more of the taxpayers' money than any other peacetime Administration, an increasingly careful scrutiny of these expenditures by the press and the public is in order.

(4) In the past three years party debate in Congress has descended to a new low in our history. The election of 1934 eliminated almost all of the competent and effective debaters from the Republican representation in Congress.

(5) Even more serious than the lack of debate between the parties is the lack of vital debate within the Democratic Party. Altogether too many measures are concocted by members of the Administration or by Departments, "sold" in private conference to the President and sprung without warning on the Majority Leaders in Congress. So, overnight, the majority in Congress must fall into line or be considered disloyal to the party.

(6) The dangers of this tendency are accentuated by the fact that the Cabinet, with certain notable exceptions, is not a strong group of responsible party leaders. Regardless of conviction, scarcely any of them would stand in the way of—much less question—a Presidential purpose.

In view of all these factors, it seems to me that it is the job of the press to provide more specific, informed, cogent and well-tempered criticism. And, unpleasant though it may sometimes be, it is part of the Administration's job to take it on the chin.

Perkasie Cattle Dealer Ends His Life By Shooting

PERKASIE, May 15—Paul S. Gulick, Perkasie cattle and poultry dealer, committed suicide by shooting himself through the heart in his office at Third and Chestnut streets, Tuesday.

Gulick, who was forty-nine years old, used a "dead-fall" string attached to a shotgun standing upright in a closet of the office. The victim is believed to have leaned over the gun, pressing the trigger. He was found by his wife, Marian, lying in the closet doorway about 1:30 p. m.

Coroner H. Clayton Moyer investigated and issued a certificate of death by suicide.

MARK 50TH ANNIVERSARY OF THEIR WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. George Vanzant
Wedded in Trenton on May 15, 1886

ARE CONGRATULATED

Their golden wedding anniversary is being quietly marked today by Mr. and Mrs. George Vanzant, 1415 Pond street.

The ceremony, which united Annabelle Sheppard and George Vanzant, was performed on the 15th of May, 1886, the officiating minister being the Rev. W. P. Strickland. The wedding occurred in the Central M. E. Church, Trenton, N. J.

The two attendants of the contracting parties 50 years ago, are both deceased. They were Miss Cora Severns, Trenton, N. J.; and Edward Winder, Bristol.

The groom of a half century ago has for the past 20 years been employed by the Philadelphia Electric Company, and previous to that time was employed by the T. B. Harkins Foundry Company. Mr. Vanzant is a member of Bristol Lodge, No. 25, F. and A. M.; Hopkins Lodge, No. 87, I. O. O. F.; Trenton Forest, No. 4, Tall Cedars; America Hose, Hook and Ladder Company, No. 2, and is an ex-chief of Bristol Volunteer Fire Department. Mr. Vanzant is also a charter member of Fraternal Patriotic Americans, and of Bristol Council, Daughters of America. Both Mr. and Mrs. Vanzant are members of Bristol M. E. Church, and the former serves as a member of the church's board of trustees.

The Vanzants have one daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Tolen.

Mr. Vanzant has made Bristol his home for practically his entire lifetime; and Mrs. Vanzant came to Bristol at the age of 10 years.

Veterans of Foreign Wars To Broadcast From Japan

An international radio program broadcast from Tokyo, Japan, will be sponsored by the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States at 6:15 p. m. (eastern standard time), today, over the Blue Network of the National Broadcasting Company.

The Japan-America broadcast is planned in conjunction with the good-will tour now being made of Japan by a V. F. W. delegation, headed by Commander-in-Chief James E. Vanzandt. Commander Vanzandt will be one of the two speakers on the program. The other will be Admiral Isamu Takeshita, representing the Dai Nippon Zaigo Gunjin-Kai. Or in other words: The Imperial Reservists Association of Japan, composed of over 3,000,000 of Japanese soldiers, sailors and marines, who may be called at a moment's notice to the colors. The broadcast will also include appropriate music by the Imperial Japanese Navy Band.

TO IMPROVE ROAD NEAR MORRISVILLE

Highway Between the Bridges
Is To Be Improved This Summer

REFUSED TO MOVE CAR

MORRISVILLE, May 15—Improvement to River Road between the two bridges will be made this summer, according to a report read at a meeting of the Morrisville Chamber of Commerce. Secretary Frank L. Muschert also reported that the State Highway Department is yet undecided what route would be used in widening the Lincoln Highway between Fallsington and the Philadelphia city line. There are now four lanes between Morrisville and Fallsington. It is proposed to eliminate the dangerous tunnel at Fallsington and build an overhead bridge, but beyond this point the question of route is still held in abeyance.

The trade body is planning to hold its usual picnic during July at Washington Crossing Park and the committee will report further details at the next meeting.

Robert J. Mathieson, of Philadelphia, employed at a local garage, politely told Patrolman Joseph Lebegegn that he would not move his car which was parked on the wrong side of Bridge street and then asked what it would cost him if he did not move. He was taken to Justice of the Peace Neal Nolan and it cost the motorist $4.25. Edward Toland, of Philadelphia, was continued on Page Six

Former Bristol Girl Is Wed at Norristown Home

Miss Mary Elisabeth Gwynn Owens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Truse Owens, Norristown, and Frank Watkins Jobs, Washington, D. C., were united in marriage last evening at the home of the bride, at 8:30 o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Owens and family were former residents of Bristol.

The Rev. H. G. Weston Smith, pastor of Cavalry Baptist Church, Norristown, solemnized the marriage.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Charlotte Gwynn Owens; and Augusta Hall, Norristown, cousin of the bride, was flower girl. Charles Evans, Norristown, served as best man.

The bride was attired in white tulle and net, and wore a coronet of roses and lilies of the valley. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet of white roses and valley lilies. Her attendant wore pink tulle and carried a colonial bouquet of pink roses and lilies of the valley. The flower girl was attractive in yellow organdy, and her bouquet was yellow roses and valley lilies, made colonial style.

Mr. and Mrs. Jobs have left for a Southern boat trip. They will reside for a while in Washington, D. C., and then in Ann Arbor, Michigan.

"IF WE DON'T WIN THIS PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION, WILL WE EVER HAVE ANOTHER PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION?" REPUBLICAN ASKS

Mrs. George R. Hemphill, President of State Council of Republican Women, Asks Bucks County Council: "Are We Going to Be a Free People, or Regimented Group?"
—Theodore R. Gardner, Republican Nominee for Congress from 9th District, Says Industry Is In Jeopardy.

(By Staff Correspondent)

DOYLESTOWN, May 15—"If we don't win this presidential election, will we ever have another presidential election?"

"Are we going to be a free people, or a regimented group?"

"The New Deal has failed because it has violated common sense in every walk of life—remember the NRA, the AAA—the killing of little pigs only for fattening of political 'hogs'."

"If you don't rise up and take care of your government, your government is going to have to take care of you."

These were only a few of the trite remarks of Mrs. George R. Hemphill, Beaver Falls, president of the state council of Republican Women, as she addressed a group of members of Bucks County Council of Republican Women, who filled the auditorium of the Doylestown Country Club, yesterday afternoon, for the Spring meeting.

Mrs. Hemphill, attractive as she is talented, was eagerly listened to and heartily applauded by the leaders of Republican women from several counties who were guests, other speakers present, and the membership as a whole.

In referring to a remark of Jay Cooke, Philadelphia, chairman of the finance committee of the state Republican committee, relative to "killing two birds with one stone" if the certificate participation plan is adopted as a means of raising funds for the Republican party (the certificates arousing interest on the part of the public as well as being a means of securing money), Mrs. Hemphill remarked "I'll be satisfied if we 'kill' one bird," and the inference needed no explanation judging from the hearty laughter at the expense of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"I like the idea of selling the certificates from house to house, and arousing the interest of the people. And we will have to ring door-bells if we want the liberty bell to continue to ring." Among other pertinent remarks of this interesting leader of Republican women in Pennsylvania, were: "Your own privacy is at stake—your mail, telegrams, and even your personal belongings." "This is the first time in the history of this country that a major political party has sunk so low as to capitalize on human misery." "Social security smugness" was rapped. "The negro slave had 'social security.' Do we want that kind of security? I sometimes wonder what kind of punishment we deserve for allowing such things to go on. The rich in the United States are the target for the present group in power, and then the next thing we know they are given some of the Roosevelt soft-soap. And I often think of when my grandmother made soft soap, she put lye in it, and it was more effective."

"Our biggest job," she said, "is to create an intelligent public opinion. Speeches do not do a lot of good and meetings like this are more or less like church—the people who should be here are not here—but those who do attend can be enlightened so they will be able to go out and enlighten the more or less dormant vote. Reach the inactive persons and the only way to do it is by personal contact. You will find that the people who have been inactive in politics now realize more than ever before in the history of the country, that their personal liberties are at stake. Your mail, your telegrams and whatnot, no longer are confidential."

"Now that the primary election is over it is the duty of every person, whether a candidate or the backers of any particular faction, to join hands and work together," Mrs. Hemphill said. "Every Democrat in office in Pennsylvania today is there because some disgruntled Republican would not back the right nominee. But let me tell you, that the same group that helped put the Democrats in office in this state, many of them in the working class, will help to put the Democrats out of office next fall."

Mrs. Hemphill said that she considered the most important set-up in the whole political layout to be the party official in each voting district.

The 53 taxes on a loaf of bread were brought to mind by the speaker; and the women were told that one-fourth of the cost of food is the cover charge that is paid to the government.

The Republican party was called by Mrs. Hemphill the prosperity party, as she mentioned the protection afforded industry by that great party. "Industry is far from being protected now."

You have the right to change things; the responsibility is yours." The need of a united front was told of Bucks and Lehigh county residents were congratulated upon their fine candidates. "The defeat suffered by the Republican party has been a challenge to our faith, and Republican men and women have met that challenge beautifully." The gathering was informed that 29 new organizations have been brought into the state council during the past year, with the membership being increased 31 per cent.

Mrs. Hemphill was but one of several outstanding leaders of the Republican party introduced during the morning and afternoon by Mrs. John W. Cooper, president of the Bucks County Council of Republican Women.

Republican nominee for United States Congress from the ninth district of Pennsylvania, Theodore R. Gardner, of Emaus, addressed the gathering during the afternoon.

"I shall always be mindful of and grateful for your support," he informed the women. "Never before have the people of the United States been faced with an election involving so many important issues as today," he continued. Referring to leaders of the New Deal at Harrisburg and Washington he told that "Neither ever had to earn a dollar for themselves. Both inherited vast amounts from their forebears who made money in American industry. And neither has ever paid out anything in industrial wages except by means of the taxpayers' money."

The 811 industries in the United States were mentioned, with over one-half of them "in one form or another being located in Bucks and Lehigh counties. These vast industries with their great circulations in money are the life stream of our purchasing power. They are our very being here in this congressional district. Between $37,000,000 and $40,000,000 in wages is paid to the workers in the Bucks-Lehigh district annually. One Bucks county industry alone, in Sellersville, paid $500,000 in wages in 1935 and another in Portland paid over $1,500,000. We want men to head our government who will work for the best interests of our own people."

The vital issues as far as industry is concerned were brought to the fore by Mr. Gardner, who also told of the great increase in the national debt "at the rate of $20 per minute from the time of the birth of the Christian era to the present time. The money has to come from taxes. From 1930 to now our industries and business enterprises have gone into their reserves to the amount of 10 billion dollars, merely to keep the wheels moving, and keep us above board. The administration at Washington is attempting to tax so as to prevent industry from building up a reserve. Industry in this country is in great jeopardy. Our only hope for future safety lies in a sweeping victory for the entire Republican party."

Mrs. Hannah M. Durham, Allentown, always a popular speaker, spoke of growing resentment against the new deal, and the need of getting out the "dormant vote."

Intense interest was shown by the large company of women in the information presented by Jay Cooke, Philadelphia, chairman of the finance committee of the state Republican committee. Mr. Cooke explained how the Republican campaigns in the past have been financed, and discussed the proposed plan of financing such in the future by means of the certificate participation plan. The plan in general is the selling of certificates at $1 each in order to obtain contributions. The state finance committee is hoping that such will be adopted, said plan embracing outstanding features of similar plans in other parts of the country. The need of co-operation between state finance committee and the various county organizations was mentioned as most essential. It is proposed to name a head for each county, as well as for each township or election district, with the necessary number of workers to make contacts in a house-to-house canvass. The details of filing of reports was gone into likewise. "After the necessary expenses are paid the funds contributed through the certificates will be divided equally between the state and national committees."

Others who brought greetings during the afternoon were:

G-MEN SCORE AGAIN

Article III. of the Constitution includes in its definition of treason the giving of aid and comfort to the enemy, and the 81st Article of War prescribes the penalty, which may be death. In any war on society as extensive as that of Karpis and Campbell, there must be those who have given aid and comfort to the foe. The G-Men purpose now to hunt them down.

In local jurisdictions there is no lack of law to reach those who harbor the fugitive or are constructive accessories to his crimes; but for one reason or another—principally the ease with which the suspect moves out of range—the instances in which local authority has imprisoned all concerned in any considerable criminal enterprise are extremely rare.

The G-Men not only labor under none of the limitations of jurisdiction which beset local police and prosecutors, but they have the facilities and the patience to wipe out gangs entire or remove them from circulation.

The knowledge that there is one agency the criminal is, in practice, powerless to elude and defeat is a source of a new feeling of security in the citizen and, we think, an incentive to honest police departments everywhere to be on their mettle. In the nature of things they can not hope to match the magnitude of the operations of the G-Men, but they can not afford to allow the disparity between Federal effectiveness and their own to appear too marked. It would be hard to estimate the power of the example of the G-Men on law enforcement generally. It would be hard, we believe, to overestimate its force.

SPARE THE WILD FLOWERS

The coming of the flower season demonstrates the truth of the observation, often made, that one-half the world is busy undoing what the other half does. It seems the same signs of spring are interpreted by some as the signal to begin planting, cultivating, building and restoring, and by others as their cue to begin picking, plucking, digging and destroying.

During the early growing season one can find most anywhere the anomalous situation of men and women planting shrubs and flowers in their town lawns and gardens and recklessly plucking every wild blossom in sight and tearing greens and plants—root, stem and leaf—out of the soil of fields and hillsides bordering country roads. Must one assume from this that mankind is more anxious to make his cities beautiful than to preserve the natural beauties of the open country?

The time is here when the public must choose between gratifying its present desire to pick the wild flowers and greens and its inevitable future desire to drive along motor highways banked with spring flowers and graceful ferns. It can not have both.

Before the automobile came into general use there was some excuse for those who seldom got beyond where the pavement ends to pick every flower and dig up every plant encountered on their infrequent excursions into the fields and hills. Now that the automobile has made the open country almost constantly accessible to nature lovers, the latter should strive to preserve the wild flowers for future visits instead of plucking them at first sight.

CROYDON

A night of fun was staged by Croydon firemen, Tuesday night. Greetings were extended to William English, secretary, in honor of his natal anniversary. The men had the pleasure of entertaining the Ladies Auxiliary. The masters of ceremonies were William Hibbert, who was assisted by Lester Williams. The program included: Solo, William Yost, "Lights Out, Sweetheart;" trio, Mrs. C. Friday, Mrs. W. Batholoma, Mrs. L. Morgan, "Music Goes Round and Around;" Mrs. Charles Kaufman, "You Had It Coming to You;" James Clark, "After the Ball;" flute solo, Lester Williams; Charles Kaufman, "Memories;" Charles Winchester, and chorus, "Sweet Adeline," accompanied by the orchestra; Mrs. William Yost, piano solo. Tables were nicely decorated, with 75 covers being laid. Then the women placed one shoe in the centre of the room, a grand "scramble" being made by each man to get a shoe, he then taking the owner to supper. Dancing was enjoyed. A parade for Memorial Day was decided upon by the firemen. They will be glad to hear from any organization interested.

EDGELY

Mrs. Mark Walters was hostess to the Ladies Auxiliary, Headley Manor Fire Company, Tuesday night. After business, cards were enjoyed. Some high scorers being Mrs. Anna Robinson, Mrs. Peter Manherz, Jr., and Mrs. Catherine Barcoe. Refreshments were served. The Auxiliary will meet at the home of Mrs. Roy Moon next month.

Mr. and Mrs. William Heinecke spent the week-end at their summer home in Pine Beach.

SPRINGTIME

Planting time has just begun; Little seedlets placed within The earth, will soon begin To shoot forth with heads erect, Their little blossoms to reflect In the sunlight of the day.

Cows grazing lazily on the lea, Song birds singing joyously; The humming of the honey bees Amid the blossoms of the trees, Swallows soaring thro' the air, The beauties of nature everywhere, After a winter cold and gray.

Tiny buttercups filled with dew Here and there some violets blue Budding flowers nodding in the breeze Leaves grazing the boughs of maple trees Wild doves begin to bill and coo All nature now looks bright and new The time of the year we love.

Evening shadows slowly falling, Wild birds to their mates are calling, Frogs, in the pond, croaking deep, The rest of nature now fast asleep, Stars shining brightly in the sky,

The beauties of Spring, we can't deny, Are the handiworks of God above.

"BLIND TO LOVE" by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

SYNOPSIS

Mary Shannon had been pampered all her life. She would have gone on that way had not the sight of her father's worn collar awakened Mary to her selfishness with the result that she left college and obtained work in the San Francisco office of the A. Hecley Steamship Company. Mary is in love with the socially prominent James ("Jamie") Todd, Jr. Although he never said he loved her, he implied that some day they would marry. Mary's superior, Stephen Bennet, rings for her just as she is ready to leave for the day.

CHAPTER II

She slipped into her coat, went to the door of the manager's office. "Yes, Mr. Bennet?"

"Oh, you're ready to go?" He pulled his long legs off the desk, slipped a flat white gold watch from his pocket. "Five two—well, never mind."

"If it's anything important—" She hadn't meant to say that. A certain disappointment in his face, in the way he laid down the little sheaf of papers in his hand, drew it from her. Of course, if it was really important. . . . She hesitated, lips still parted.

"Well, it's important—to me, and, I thought, perhaps to you. . . . No, don't get your notebook. We'll do the report tomorrow. It's that wire I got this afternoon from Seattle. I'm ordered up to the home office. Going to be manager there. It's a big thing for me—"

She saw he was awfully proud. Well, good for him. Good for Bennet! He wasn't so bad, really. Not bad looking, either, and not so old. . . . Now if he'd just hurry with it, and not make her lose the boat. . . .

He was floundering around. Something in his eye. . . . something for her. . . .

"You mean, the new man won't want me?" She tried to keep her voice steady, but the idea was frightening. Losing a job now, when there weren't any. . . . being out of work. . . .

"Oh, no!" She breathed again.

"Isn't that?" He cleared his throat. "It's a promotion for me, you see. They said I could bring my—my assistant with me. Mr. Samson, the Seattle man who's coming down here, thought of bringing his stenographer with him, so a complete exchange—"

"You mean for me to go to Seattle? To leave here?"

"Well, I thought. . . . it would be a promotion for you, too—the larger office, right in the lumber country where our business originates. I feel sure I could get you more money. If you would like to make the change—"

"Oh, Mr. Bennet, I couldn't. I have my family here—my friends. I couldn't leave. I really don't see. . . . Couldn't I stay here? Would Mr. Samson keep me?"

"Oh, yes. It can be arranged some way. I'll fix it for you. . . . I just thought—the larger opportunity—"

Mr. Bennet reached for his hat. He looked rather tired.

He walked out ahead of her, leaving her to lock the office. . . . He never thought of anything like that—and she with less than five minutes to make his ferry!

She hated commuting. Hated it most of all on rainy nights. The little California street cable car was a life saver when you were late, but it cost a nickel to ride, and when every nickel counts. . . .

Besides, you had to run the last long block anyway, for the California street cable stopped at Market.

People got in her way. Old girls with umbrellas, stopping gingerly on the wet pavements. People poking along from the other direction. Coming out of the markets and fruit stands, laden with paper bags—walking slowly. Just because their bags weren't in, they'd take their time, and you could miss yours.

A big man with flapping overcoat and a bag of golf sticks was running fast ahead. What does anyone want with golf sticks on a rainy day? But she followed close behind him, and with his running interference got through the newsboys, the taxi men, the jam at the embankment.

Automatically, her eyes sought the clock over the gate. Half a minute to spare.

She stopped, panting a little, reached in her bag for her "commute," saw that the new movie magazines were on the stands. Hesitated. A movie magazine, or carmelos?

The flower stand, the familiar flower stand, so thrilling to tourists, almost invisible to her who passed it every morning and night, happened to catch her eye. Though she liked flowers, she seldom had time for these. The clock above the counter was about the only thing she ever consciously looked at, except the panel of mirror in which you could examine your feet, your legs, your skirt, and finally the whole of you, as you came down the stairs from the upper gateway in the morning.

It was the daffodils, planted in pots with pussy willows, that caught her eye tonight. Cute! Ma would go crazy over a thing like that. But they'd be expensive and you'd look goopy, hugging one home.

Roses and violets and pansies headed high on the counter. Gardenias, special today, 15 cents! "A gardenia, please."

It looked darling on her blue coat. She looked down at it fondly as she walked unhurriedly through the gate to the Oakland ferryboat, a matter of several seconds left.

But after she had dodged the talky Johnson girls, and made up her mind that Ethlyn Piper had missed the boat, she wished she hadn't bought the flower. No telling what the new manager would be like. Bennet hadn't cut her, but the new one might be an economy hound. She was too devilish extravagant, anyway. . . .

Her fingers twitched on the little package she had in her hands. Such a little package. Yet it had cost eight ninety-five. Better tell Ma it cost four ninety-five. Ma would faint—think she was crazy, buying eight ninety-five night gowns. And so she was.

Mary's gloves came off. One hand slipped into the bag, under the protective tissue paper, brought out a fold of ivory satin, an edge of deep ecrú Alençon lace.

It was a beautiful night gown, but nothing she needed. Though it's not such a bad idea to be prepared. Jamie wasn't the kind to propose and be accepted, and ask you to name a day, and send out cards for a wedding. He'd be far more likely to say, "Let's go to Reno over the week-end, hon." Probably suggest it about 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon and want to leave Saturday night. . . .

She smiled a little when she thought of how it would be, driving up to Reno to be married, in Jamie's blue-green roadster. It could be any time—this week even. She thought of the things she would take. The special, best things tucked away with jasmine sachet in corners where Ma wouldn't be so likely to notice.

You could hardly smuggle a pair of garters into the house. Somebody would find out about it. Then Ma and Aunt Willie would have to know where you got them, and how much they cost.

Oh, well! She shut her eyes for a moment. It was all kind of hard on you. Even Jamie, and going to Reno, for every girl wants a real wedding. Not much chance of her ever getting one. Not while he took good care she didn't meet his folks.

Not that she wanted to meet them, really. Too bad Jamie wasn't born an orphan!

As she got off the train at Grove, and walked up the two blocks past the Nan and Myrtle beauty parlor and the neighborhood grocery, she permitted herself to speculate on the chances of his becoming one.

His mother was supposed to have a bad heart, and his father was well past 60. They couldn't last forever.

She stopped to look in the mail box before she drew her key from her bag, and opened the front door. There was always the chance of the family forgetting to look, and always the chance that he'd write.

As usual, the box was empty. "Hello!" she called from the little square front hall.

"Hello, dear," Ma called from the kitchen.

Something was wrong. You could always tell with Ma. Her voice was a dead give away.

"Look—I brought you a gardenia. Smell it! Sweet? What's the news? Don't you feel well?"

Ma, flushed from cooking, her movements flurried and a bit strained, laid down the loaf of bread she was cutting and sniffed at the white fragrance of the waxy flower. "Ah-m-m. Lovely—I'm fine. But you oughtn't to spend your money. I keep telling you, a nickel here and a nickel there. . . . what's in that package, Babe?"

"Oh, just something extravagant. I'll show you afterwards."

"Extravagant all right, I guess. Well, everything's ready. Call your Pa. He's in the basement nattering with the radio, though there's nothing the matter with it I could see. I'm all ready to dish up. WIL-LIE! DIN-NER!" and then in a whisper, as she whisked the peas and carrots into a dish. "She's found out something—about Jamie Todd. She wouldn't tell me what it was, but she's hinting like it was worse than a murder. Now don't you mind, Babe, because you know how she is. She means well, but she—"

Ma's Shannon's lips stiffened.

Then she laughed. "Oh! Well! If THAT'S all, I should think you'd know more than to LISTEN to her. She gets everything wrong, and if you ask me, she's getting worse all the time. Heavens, Ma, what OF it! Suppose she did hear something. Wait—I'll ask her—"

"No, I wouldn't. She's been acting very funny. She's got one of her mysterious streaks on. And she's been in her room for hours, fixing herself. I don't know what for. WIL-LIE! DIN-NER!"

READY!—It's a facial, I think. She took an egg in with her, and mixed some kind of gray stuff—shh! Well, Willie! I thought you'd died in there!"

Aunt Willie, no longer young, and not yet resigned to it, moved with an exaggerated swagger. She was wearing an old rose crepe that stretched taut across her wide bosom and hips, and revealed an unfashionable length of thin muscular legs in light chiffon hose, in which two runs had been clumsily darned, and an undergrowth of heavy dark hair was clearly shadowed.

Ma had been right. Willie had been "fixing herself" again, with the usual disastrous results. Her face was a blotchy, angry pink, under a coating of pale mauve powder.

She was four or five years younger than Ma, and looking older. Ma, in spite of a few gray hairs and a little matronly plumpness, was still fresh and pretty, with her soft dark hair, her still smooth ivory skin and clear, blue-gray eyes, serenely far apart.

Mary got her looks from her mother, though she was tall and slender like Pa.

"Well, I hope I haven't kept you waiting," Aunt Willie was saying, as she darted around the table, rattling silver, accomplishing nothing. "I was just lookin' at my permanent. I'll have to get another—it's all grown out, so it's kind of untidy like. What's that, Dora? Chicken pie?"

"For goodnessake! Lamb! Well, we did have a leg o' lamb day before yesterday, didn't we? Well—for goodnessake!"

"I can fry you an egg—I keep forgetting about your diet, Willie! Ma! Can't you fix your gardenia after dinner, and get your father's? Everything's on the table, gettin' cold."

SYNOPSIS

Mary Shannon had been pampered all her life. She would have gone on that way had not the sight of her father's worn collar awakened Mary to her selfishness with the result that she left college and obtained work in the San Francisco office of the A. Hecley Steamship Company. Mary is in love with the socially prominent James ("Jamie") Todd, Jr. Although he never said he loved her, he implied that some day they would marry. Mary's superior, Stephen Bennet, notifies her that he is to be transferred to Seattle. She wants Mary to go along as his secretary but she can not bear the thought of leaving her family. That night, Mary's mother informs her that Aunt Willie has heard some gossip about "Jamie."

CHAPTER III

Pa was coming in at the back door. He was a tall man, with narrow sloping shoulders, and a stringy neck too thin for the collar.

He called to them all, but his eyes were for Mary, young, pretty Mary, still fussing with the flower, at the sink.

"Move over, make room for a man!" With a push that was at once rough and tender he took her place, washed face and hands with a great lathering and splashing, while Ma began pouring the tea, and Aunt Willie rambled on about her digestion, and two-fifty percents, and something she'd heard about a new reducing bread.

"Sit down. Sit down everybody! Eat while it's hot. Mary, pass your father the carrots 'n peas—"

The food was good. The color came back to Mary Shannon's cheeks. She was rested. One day, the working day, was over. Another was starting. . . . another existence. The night, to dream, to plan, to do with as she wished.

"So I said to her, I says, 'Excuse me, madam, but our doughnuts have ALWAYS been twenty cents,' I says—"

Aunt Willie telling about her day in the bakery.

Dad, chewing methodically, reaching with his fork for more bread; Ma, getting up to scrape the last of the peas from saucepan to serving dish. Eat old Mary, wheezing and begging for tidbits, and Aunt Willie screaming, "Down, darlin'! You can't have mamma's cinner—no, you can't! Oh, all right, speak, then! Speak, Tootsie! Look at her. If that isn't CUTE! For goodnessake!"

Hearing, yet not hearing, Mary sat there at the kitchen table, one of them, yet not one of them. Through her mind flitted little pictures of the things she wanted to do tonight. Wash her hair, for one thing. It was at its best when just shampooed. Jamie called her Fluffy Top, sometimes. Fluffy Top. . . .

"What's the awful discovery you made about my boy friend, Aunt Willie?"

"What? Down, Tootsie! GET DOWN! Oh, for goodnessake! I almost forgot. Well, I hardly know whether to mention it or not. I thought I might speak to you about it later, when we were alone—"

"Is it too terrible for Ma and Pa to hear? Oh, go ahead, Aunt Willie. Let's have the worst. I hope he doesn't drink—"

"Oh, it's nothing like that! Nothing about his character, I mean. It's just that—well, I don't know what to make of it. It said in the Sacramento paper—it just happened to come in wrapped around some pie plates, and I just happened to look at it. It said that a Miss Vesta Grainger had just announced her engagement to James Todd, Jr. I couldn't understand it. I practically understood that he was engaged to you. So I thought I'd tell you. I really didn't know—wait! I'll get the paper—"

Mary Shannon waited.

— RECIPES —

Apricot Conserve

Twenty apricots, cut in halves; one pint canned pineapple, four cups sugar, juice of two oranges, one-fourth pound blanched almonds.

Cut apricots into small pieces and soak in cold water over night. Add pineapple, sugar and cook thirty to forty minutes. Add orange juice and blanched almonds and pour into sterilized jars. When cool, cover with paraffin.

Creole Shrimp

Two tablespoons fat, one-half cup cream, three tablespoons tomato puree, one cup boiled rice, one chopped pimiento, paprika, one cup shrimp, one teaspoon chopped celery, one teaspoon chopped onion, one chopped pepper, one-half teaspoon salt.

Cook fat with onions five minutes, stirring constantly. Add shrimp, rice and cream. When thoroughly heated, add rest of ingredients. Turn on hot serving dish and garnish with toast points and parsley.

Meat Pie

Two onions, one cup chopped celery, six tablespoons fat, two pounds beef, two teaspoons salt, one-half teaspoon pepper, one green pepper, cut fine; three tablespoons chopped parsley, two cups cooked, diced carrots; two cups peas, five tablespoons flour.

Dice and brown the onion and celery in two tablespoons fat. Add the meat and sear well. Cover with water. Add salt and pepper and let simmer until tender, about two hours. Remove meat from liquid and cut into cubes. Add carrots and peas. Thicken the meat stock with flour, add the meat and vegetables and cook for ten minutes. Place meat and vegetable mixture in a well-greased baking dish and cover with gravy.

Make a biscuit dough of two cups of flour, three tablespoons shortening, three-fourths cup milk, four teaspoons baking powder, and one teaspoon salt. Cut the shortening into the flour, baking powder, and one teaspoon salt. Quickly stir in the milk. Roll out and cut with a biscuit cutter. Place biscuits on top of meat and gravy. Bake twenty minutes in a hot oven of 450 degrees F. Serve at once.

Brownies

One cup granulated sugar, one-half cup melted shortening, one-half cup pastry flour, one-half teaspoon vanilla, two squares chocolate, melted; two whole eggs, one cup chopped nuts, few grains salt.

Mix sugar, melted chocolate, melted shortening, beaten eggs and flour in order given. Add chopped nuts, which have been dredged with a little flour, flavoring and salt. Pour mixture in square, well-greased pan and bake in an oven of 325 degrees for an hour or until cake springs back when pressed with the finger. Cool and cut in small squares.

Graham Popovers

Two-thirds cup graham flour, one-third cup flour, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one cup milk, two eggs, one tablespoon melted shortening.

Mix and sift the white flour and salt into a bowl, add graham flour. Add milk gradually. Add beaten eggs and shortening. Beat batter five minutes with an egg beater. Pour batter into greased, hot popover pans. Bake in a 450 degree oven for 30 minutes. Reduce heat to 350 degrees and bake 15 minutes longer. Do not open door during first 15 minutes of baking.

Vitamin A

Green leaves and yellow rooted vegetables are excellent sources of Vitamin A. This vitamin is known as the anti-infection vitamin and helps to build up body resistance to bacterial infections which enter the body through the mucous membrane.

Natural Color of Bananas

Bananas for salads will keep their natural color if sprinkled with powdered sugar or lemon juice.

Shortening may be measured accurately by the water method. If the recipe calls for one-third cup, fill measuring cup two-thirds full of water, add enough shortening to bring water to top of cup, pour off water and you have exactly one-third cup of shortening.

French Peas

Two pounds of peas; one small head lettuce; salt to taste.

Shell the peas and cook in one half cup of water. Allow to boil gently for five minutes, then add the shredded head of lettuce. Simmer until the peas are tender and the lettuce wilted. The water will evaporate. Season with salt, pepper and butter.

Mexican Spinach

Chop two tomatoes with one teaspoon of sugar and half teaspoon salt and one-fourth teaspoon pepper. Simmer until tomatoes are thoroughly cooked and tender. Combine with one pound of fresh spinach or one can of spinach, well drained, simmer until heated through and serve.

WHAT IS FOOD?

Volumes have been written on the classification and values of foods, with the result that mothers today are mentally in chaos as to the foods to feed their families and children.

There are six essential food factors and each one plays its important part.

PROTEINS: These substances are essential for growth; replacement of tissue and holding the body in repair. The chief source of our protein foods are found in eggs, nuts, fish, dairy products, gelatin and meats. It is a good rule not to eat more than one protein food at a meal. Proteins may be combined as we often do in bacon and eggs but it is not a good health habit as it overloads the body with one type of food. Protein foods are the only ones that contain nitrogen in a usable form and as this is necessary for health, these foods are essential.

FATS: These substances supply the body with heat; give a padding for the nerves and muscle; and furnish a place of storage for energy. Excellent sources of fat are nuts, cheese, butter and lesser sources; fowl, ham, ice cream and cream. Softer fats and emulsified fats are more easily digested than the harder ones.

CARBOHYDRATES: Heat and energy are supplied by carbohydrates. They also assist in the digestion of fatty materials. Sugar and starches are the heading under which we find carbohydrates. This type of food is highly concentrated and gives warmth and energy more quickly than the proteins and fats. Over-eating of carbohydrates and proteins leads to an acid condition which in time causes trouble. Sources of carbohydrates are potatoes, rice, breads, sugar, honey, fruits, tapioca and nuts.

VITAMINS: One of the most important substances found in food. Their most important function is assisting in the assimilation of proteins and carbohydrates. Vitamins are present in all natural foods but are easily destroyed by heat or refining.

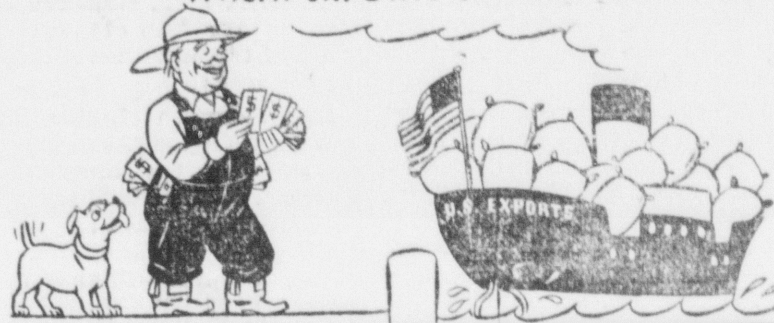

MINERAL SALTS: This substance is needed for strong bones and sound teeth. Mineral salts also furnish the necessary materials for keeping the blood stream healthy. There are sixteen minerals that make up the body substances and these must constantly be replaced with food. Foods in their natural state contain essential mineral salts and seem to explain the reason for the health and long lives of our ancestors.

WATER: One of our most important food factors in that it dissolves the foods so that they may be utilized

NEW DEAL CRUSHES FARMER

1932 CORN EXPORTS 17 TIMES IMPORTS
WHEAT EXPORTS 6 TIMES IMPORTS

1935 CORN IMPORTS 76 TIMES EXPORTS
WHEAT IMPORTS 144 TIMES EXPORTS

THE AMERICAN FARMER has only begun to realize that visionary New Deal policies are costing him millions of dollars.

In 1932 we EXPORTED 33 million dollars worth of Wheat, 3 million dollars worth of Corn. In 1935, under New Deal policies which left our farmers without protection, EXPORTS of Wheat and Corn shrunk to almost nothing, while IMPORTS of Wheat rose to 30 million dollars, IMPORTS of Corn to 20 million dollars.

No wonder the New Deal has failed to restore the purchasing power of the American Farmer. It has wiped out his EXPORT market and flooded his home market with IMPORTED grain, grown by cheap labor in foreign countries.

YOU can't keep good news from spreading—so the word is out that the handsome Series 40 Buick Special is not only big, but amazingly thrifty to boot!

One fellow, for instance, writes that he is getting three more miles per gallon than the salesman promised—why, asks he, don't we print such important news?

The fact is, we don't advertise specific miles-per-gallon figures because you simply can't set a figure that could be right for all drivers under all conditions.

So, instead of following the popular custom of claiming the world, on such matters we prefer to play safe and "talk small"—leaving Buick's really surprising frugality to be one of those nice things you discover after you've driven one awhile!

It works out fine, too! Owners are constantly coming in to brag about high mileage averages, low costs on oil, long trips without a penny for service or attention.

With all of its style, and comfort, and stand-out performance—at prices beginning at $765* list—Buick's a winner and its thrift is all plus. Ride in one and see if that's not the truth!

Converted Into Inner-Spring Mattresses

Our method of carefully picking and thoroughly sterilizing the hair makes the Renovated mattress like new. We MODERNIZE Hair Mattresses in our OWN FACTORY by converting them into luxuriously soft Inner-Spring Mattresses, building the newly sterilized Hair overtop of and on the bottom of the Springs. We also do this work at special prices for Hotels, Hospitals and other institutions where there is a quantity of mattresses.

Feather Beds and Pillows Sterilized

Our process of carefully sterilizing the feathers puts new life into them, practically giving the housewife a new bed or pillow. The price for renovating and making feather beds and pillows over is not expensive.

ing the afternoon were Mrs. George Omrod, president of Lehigh County Council; and assemblyman William Yeakel, who for the fifth time appeared before the women as a candidate for membership in the state House of Representatives. "I hope you send me back to Harrisburg for the fifth term. I will remember it all my life," he said.

Musical numbers at the start of the afternoon program were given by the Perkasee mixed quartet, these being "Land of Hope and Glory," and "Dear Land of Hope."

Listed on the speakers' program for the initial session of the day were: Mrs. Frank Passmore, Downingtown, legislative chairman of the Chester County Council of Republican Women; Miss Nancy Highley, president of the Norristown Council of Republican Women; and Miss Thomas, president of the Chester County Council.

The subject assigned to Mrs. Passmore was "Council Efficiency." The objects of the Chester County Council were enumerated, and the women of this county told that Chester county council is zoned into districts with key women in each. "We have key women in each district, as it is difficult to have the entire membership at monthly meetings. Therefore local meetings are also arranged." The news letter of her council was displayed by Mrs. Passmore; and the "School of Politics" sponsored by the Junior group told of turning attention to the New Deal, the guest speaker mentioned "Although the New Deal has meant employment to many people it has not tended to any definite solution for the economic chaos."

The gathering was told by Miss Highley that "we are getting nearer to this old socialistic trend than ever before. It makes us quake. We should be alert. In some European countries theatres are closed on the evening when the dictators speak over the radio, and the people have no excuse for not listening to their dictators. Of Mrs. Horace Reeder, and Miss Ada P. course we don't have to listen to our

"dictator"; we can shut him off. I have a friend who lived in Russia for years and who found it necessary to spend one-half of each day in the stores in order to secure enough food for that day, due to the poor sales methods. We should not let communism seep into our schools, and among our young people."

The need of a greater degree of willingness on the part of women to attend more political meetings was stressed by Mrs. Cooper. "If we are as interested as we should be in the success of the Republican party we should be willing to drop some other things and be willing to have more meetings," she stated.

Several members of the Bucks Council were listed on the day's program. Mrs. Minerva Martin, membership chairman, named the winners of the state membership campaign for 1935, and gave details of the campaign for 1936, urging more to join, and the present members to work with the membership committee. A cash prize is offered by the county council of Bucks to the member securing the most members for the council.

Mrs. J. Harry Hoffman, of this borough, reported on important federal bills pending, stressing in particular the relief bill, soil erosion bill, and the one pertaining to tax revision. Mrs. Fred Beans, Yardley, reviewed the state bills now pending. Mrs. Ada B. Reeder, Newtown, read an article, "The New Deal vs. the Housewife."

The visiting speakers were guests at luncheon of the Bucks County Council. All parts of Bucks County were included in the representative group of women in attendance.

A brief portion of the morning was given over to business details. Following Mrs. Cooper's warm welcome, Mrs. Joseph Palmer, Langhorne, read minutes of the last meeting; and Mrs. Horace Effrig, Newtown, submitted her report as treasurer. Named as members of a committee to raise funds to reimburse the treasury are: Mrs. Effrig, Newtown; Miss Elizabeth Brown, Southampton; Mrs. Harry Frederick, Croydon; Mrs. John Luger, Wrightstown; Mrs. A. Russell Thomas, Doylestown; Mrs. Samuel S. Gray, Newtown; Mrs. Horace Reeder, and Miss Ada P. Fabian, Newtown.

The auditors appointed by Mrs. Cooper are: Mrs. Samuel Gray and Mrs. William Lowry.

With the terms of the president, other officers and directors expiring next Fall, the nominating committee was named to work in conjunction with the advisory committee. The former committee includes: Mrs. C. Wilson Roberts, representing the lower section of the county; Mrs. A. Russell Thomas, the middle; and Mrs. Elmer E. Althouse, the upper portion.

Advisory committee will include: Mrs. Clarence J. Buckman, Langhorne, chairman; Mrs. Joseph Palmer, Langhorne; Mrs. Walter Baum, Sellersville; Mrs. Frank M. Linton, Newtown; Mrs. Mahlon Rickert, Sellersville; Mrs. Benjamin H. Eastburn, Wrightstown; Mrs. Oscar O. Bean, Mrs. Frank Gerlitzki, Doylestown.

Schools to be included are: Bensalem, Bristol, Buckingham, Doylestown, Fallsington, Langhorne-Middleton, Lower Makefield, Morrisville, New Hope, Newtown, Northampton, Quakertown, Sellersville, Perkasee, Springfield, Upper Southampton.

Bristol will be represented by: Seventh grade (Jefferson), Carmella Gulotta, Ruth Shire, Margaret Rathke; eighth grade (Bath St.), Grace Downing; eighth grade (Harriman), Elizabeth Carnvale, Sara Ellis, Jane Lynch, Hope Kwothka, Anna Warwick; high school, Phyllis Werner, Helen Simon, Alice Kwasnol, Rose Naveta, Anna Nealis, Elvera Pagnone, Esther Dunbar, Kathryn Quinn, Isabel Margerum, Helen DeWitt.

Miss Clara Lerman and Miss Grace

Haas, Bath street teachers, will accompany the group which will make the trip by bus, leaving the high school at eight a. m.

Poppy Day Here To Be Observed; Now On Sale

With the approach of Memorial Day, again the beautiful red poppy of Flanders Field is offered as a tribute to the memory of the soldier-dead who saw the brave flower blooming in the battle areas.

The American Legion and the American Legion Auxiliary sponsor the sales of the memorial poppy. American Legion Auxiliary of Robert W. Bracken Post has as chairman of its poppy committee, Mrs. William DeVoe. The sale will start in Bristol today.

These poppies are made by disabled men not receiving compensation from the government, in the following institutions: Pennsylvania Soldiers and Sailors Home, Erie; Pennsylvania State Sanatorium, South Mountain; U. S. Veterans Hospital, Aspinwall; and U. S. Veterans Hospital, Perry Point, Md.

This year over 800,000 poppies have been made, thus enabling these men to earn a few dollars for themselves and their families. Poppies have been made throughout the year and have added much to the enjoyment of the men.

The entire proceeds of the poppy sales are used for direct relief, relief which is most essential. This year, more than ever before, due to the recent floods in practically all parts of the State, will the posts and units be called upon for relief.

By wearing a Legion Poppy you:

Honor your nation's heroic dead;

assist the disabled veterans in the hospitals; relieve the needy in your community.

"In memory of the dead, help the needy living. Buy and wear a poppy on Memorial Day," urges the Legion and Auxiliary.

HULMEVILLE

Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Farrelly and children, Anna Marie, Peggy and Jack, of Olney, were dinner guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Bailey.

A visit to relatives in Hulmeville was paid on Sunday by Mrs. William Engle and son, "Billy," Doylestown.

and William K. Harrison, Queenstown, Md.

The week-end was passed by Mr. and Mrs. Washington Head in Canton, Ohio.

A "doggie" roast was conducted last evening by members and friends of the Girls Friendly candidates, of Grace Episcopal Church. The roast was held along the Neshaminy Creek, near Newportville.

TULLYTOWN

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Poane, Trenton, were recent visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Poane.

Ernest Pezza, New York City, was a week-end visitor of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Pezza.

Mrs. William Magowan, Morrisville, spent a week with her mother, Mrs. Mercy Harison.

SOLDIERS MAKE POPPY REPLICAS

U. S. Veterans of the World War shown above are busily engaged in fashioning red poppies for sale at the Memorial season. For many of the wounded veterans this is the only means of livelihood. The American Legion posts and Auxiliaries are selling the poppies as an aid to the ex-service men.

HOLLYWOOD—Since what happened at the Trocadero not so long ago, Betty's Famous "vegetable" hat has become famous.
In a season of absurd hats, this one of Betty's is tops. It is covered with imitation caviar, and sounds and looks like you. The stay-up-laters went into hysterics when the star made her appearance at the new creation. Quicker fingers sent a steak to Betty's table suggesting she put it on the hat and Al Scott followed with a poached egg. The ribbing went on for hours. All Hollywood is now asking, "Have you seen Betty Famous' vegetable hat?"

Fred Astaire is turning over what he suspects may be a new film-land racket. The RKO star went out the other day to see how the construction of his house was coming along and found a cameraman taking pictures of it. Under questioning, the chap said he wasn't connected with any publication but recently had come from Chicago and knew where he could sell pictures of stars' houses for $25 apiece. He ducked out before Astaire could get any further information, but the star is watching his cippians and, if the picture the fellow took shows up, he is going to start an investigation.

Spring's in the air or else W. C. Fields is feeling a lot better. The star and his tailor were in session one whole afternoon. Bill was measured for three sport suits, four business suits, seven fancy sport coats and 12 shirts.

As soon as "Poppy" is finished, the star is going to Soboba Hot Springs for a rest.

You Asked Me and I'm Telling You! Mary K. Burton, Minneapolis. The argument as to what sewing machine really is goes on furiously, but our choice for the best definition is that of Leo Rubin and Itzhak Balinger. They call it "Sweet Heat".

If you see Heather Angel sitting on her front porch these afternoon, it's foreign star now on location?

is not just to enjoy the air. The star's Dalmatian coach dog was struck down by a motorist who sped on. Heather put the dog in her car and gave chase, but the hit-and-runner escaped. She thinks she will recognize the car, however, and is keeping a watch hoping it will pass her house again.

It's a silly story, but struck us as funny.

On the "Texas Rangers" location, Paramount is using an "army" of Indians. Jack Oakie came upon one of them, Crazy Horse by name, looking very dejected.

"What's the matter, Crazy Horse?" asked Jack.

The Indian made as if to walk away but changed his mind.

"Umph," he grunted. "Me tired of playing Indian."

News jottings of the day: Janet Gaynor did a sneak-out of Hollywood and is motor-touring somewhere in Mexico with her mother. They were headed towards Mexico City and were going to drive as far as they could get in 10 days. Just saw the preview of "Under Two Flags" and it's a honey. Darryl Zanuck had a rough time finding a star to play "Cigarette" but Claudette Colbert was worth waiting for. Wait until you see her love scene with Ronald Colman on the desert.

June Brewster's colored maid has been hitting her regularly for raises and now June finds that the girl has to go to New York to straighten out her 1934 income tax. The maid owns an interest in five Harlem beauty shops. Ruth Chatterton is home ill with the flu and the "Girls Dormitory" troupe had to elude around her. The Assistance League is staging six nightly revues, a la Major Bowes, at the Wilshire (Hell) theater beginning May 11. They are to be called "Discoveries of 1935" and are to feature amateur from southern California cities, with movie stars acting as judges.

TODAY'S PUZZLE—

Read recently divorced cameraman receiving long distance telephone calls from a famous and glamorous foreign star now on location?

THE BRISTOL CLOVER CLUB

IS PAYING GOOD CASH TO YOUR FRIENDS
EVERY DAY

The idea is simple — you do nothing but get a clover card from your merchant who belongs to the Clover Club, and after each purchase he will punch this card. Each card contains 3 to 6 four-leaf clovers. When a clover is punched out, you receive in cash one-half of your purchase money.

Mr. Walter Anen, of 17 Woodside Ave., Edgely, purchased a dining room suite at Factors-to-You Furniture Store, on Mill Street, and after paying for his purchase, handed Mr. Cantwell his clover card to punch. Sure enough, he hit a clover and was handed $25.00 in cash for his prize.

YOU CAN DO THE SAME at any of the following stores:

THRILLING GAME KEEPS FANS HERE ON EDGE

(By T. M. June)

Everything that one would expect to see at a good ball game was exhibited last night on Leedom's field as the Hibernians nosed out the St. Ann's A. A. team to give the Purple and Gold its first defeat of the Bristol Twilight League. Final score was 5-4.

Good catches, wonderful stops, bad judgment, wild pitching, good pitching, and hitting in the pinches were combined to give the sport fans their most thrilling game of the season thus far.

For the first three innings, neither team could dent the home plate. St. Ann's had opportunities in the first and third but passed them up. For the first three cantos, the Hibs proved harmless. Joe Antonelli did not give them a sign of a bingle during this stretch, and Eddie Sullivan doing the hill chores for the Hibernians whiffed eight St. Ann's batters.

HULMEVILLE ANXIOUS TO WIN WEEK-END GAMES

Howard Black's Hulmeville A. A. team will attempt to win both of its scheduled games over the week-end and climb from the cellar of the Delaware River League. The Hulmeville team meets Newtown at Newtown, Saturday, and Sunday will return to its home field to meet the league-leading Lambertville nine.

The 1935 champions are running into hard luck lately and have dropped three of their four games by one run. Last Sunday they lost a thriller to Morrisville in ten innings, being beaten as the result of a wild toss to the plate. If the boys of Howard Black are successful over the week-end, they have a chance of climbing into fourth place in the loop.

Ike Watson will most likely toss them up tomorrow while on the Sabbath Day. Manager Black will do the flinging in an effort to give the Top Rock Club its first defeat of the season.

A large crowd from Bristol and vicinity is expected to witness the Lambertville-Hulmeville match, which will begin at three o'clock sharp.

FALLS DEFEATS MORRISVILLE

FALLSINGTON, May 15.—The Falls Township teams defeated Morrisville in both divisions of a track meet here yesterday afternoon. The Falls senior section nosed out the Morrisville seniors, 33-29, while the home junior team easily won, 25-10.

Can Bold Venture Repeat at Preakness?

Only three winners of the Derby have won Pimlico's classic Preakness within the last ten years. They are Gallant Fox (1930), Burgoon King (1932), and Omaha (1935). Can Bold Venture win where only three out of ten horses have won? Here are the records of the winners: Gallant Fox ran the Derby in 2:07 3/5, and the Preakness in 2:00 3/5. Burgoon King's time for the Derby was 2:05 1/5 and for the Preakness 1:59 4/5. Omaha's Derby time was 2:05, and Preakness, 1:58 2/5. Bold Venture's time for the Derby was 2:03 3/5, faster than the other three. Can he repeat?

COMPLETE REMODELING ST. ANN'S OPEN-AIR ARENA

Yesterday afternoon the finishing touches were put to the remodelled St. Ann's arena which is located in the rear of the St. Ann's Athletic Association club house on Wood street. Open air boxing will start in the arena, May 25.

Under the direction of building-manager Charles Alta, the arena's seating capacity has been increased from 1000 to 1400. The entire east section which was a reserve section last season is now part of the general admission bleachers. More ring-side seats are available, making the increase of 400 being in the general admission section only.

All day yesterday, Alta was busy guiding boxing patrons about the arena and explaining the work done by the St. Ann's Athletic Association to the structure. Fans are invited to witness the arena now that the ring has been constructed and those who are interested in procuring seats for the outdoor season may come and pick out their post. Over 250 seats have already been reserved for the opening show.

Matchmaker Patsey Moffo has already begun work on his outdoor shows and it is Moffo's intention to have several encores on the card which the localities have been clamoring for, namely: Vince Della and Tony Surello, Tony Puccio and Ralph Mazzone, Jules Zeffries and Frankie Fal-

Edgely vs. Hibernians (Leedom's)
Odd Fellows at Tullytown

The Excelsior Colored Club recovered from its doldrums and last night on the Bath Road diamond pounced on Mel Wright in the second inning and scored nine times which enabled them to register an easy 12-1 triumph over the Bath Road Men's Club. It was the first win in four starts for the colored boys.

Every player with the exception of Sammy Ross shared in the batting orgy of the Excelsior team which also had 12 bingles. Harry Thompson did not make a hit but never was at bat officially because he had two walks and a sacrifice.

The assault was made on Mel Wright and Reds Cummings. The losers had five hits off Elijah Bragg. Muth was their leading sticker with two hits in three turns at bat.

BRISTOL HIGH BUNNIES TO OPPOSE FALLSINGTON

With a chance to insure themselves of at least a tie in the Lower Bucks County League pennant chase, the Bristol High School Bunnies meet Coach Jim Doherty's cellar-dwelling Fallsington nine at Fallsington today.

At present Bristol High and Newtown High are tied for the lead position in the race and both clubs have but one game to play. The Bunnies meet the Orange and Black today, while Newtown will battle Morrisville's Bulldogs on Monday. The leaders have seven victories with two defeats.

In an effort to clinch the tie for the gonfalon Coach Bill Dougherty will send Billy Gallagher, red-headed left-hander, to the mound. Gallagher has had a week's rest and is about ripe to continue the Bunnies' string of unscathed upon innings. Bristol's opponents have not dented the pentagon in the last 27 frames.

If both Bristol and Newtown come through with victories in their remaining game, a play-off will be necessary to determine who will represent the lower end of the league in the annual series with the upper section. New Hope is leading the latter league and will probably cop the hunting.

"ZYZZLE"

Just suppose you wanted to find the word zyzzle in the dictionary. Would you start at the first page, leaf through the entire book and come finally to the last word, on the last page? That, you say, would be an insane waste of time.

Now, suppose you need accessories for house-cleaning.

Suppose you need soap, or floor-wax, or a pail and mop. Many stores are featuring real bargains in household needs for spring. Yet you waste time and effort, if you walk from store to store . . . wander from counter to counter looking for what you want at the price you want to pay.

Instead, you may sit comfortably at home and learn where and when to make the best buys. That's all printed for you in the advertisements of this paper. You have only to read them and heed them to save time, save tiresome shopping, and save money.
